Your First Real Conversation

The fear is mostly about not understanding how the tool works, and the fastest cure is one honest conversation about something you actually care about. Not a test question. A real one. This page gets you there in fifteen minutes.

Pick one real situation from your week — something small but true. A dinner problem, a scheduling knot, a conversation you're circling: _____

Now build the request the way you'd brief a capable person you'd just met. AI doesn't know your life unless you tell it:

Who's involved and what are their ages or roles? _____

What's the situation, in two honest sentences? _____

What do you want back — ideas, a plan, a script, a different perspective? _____

What limits matter — time, money, energy, a kid who won't eat anything green? _____

Write the full prompt here, then type it in: _____

After the answer comes back, don't close the tab. Push once: ask for a shorter version, a different tone, or one more option. Write what you asked: _____
